

drawSQL

I decided to use one-to-many for tickets being held by each customer since they could potentially have multiple tickets each. The same goes for concessions. Each movie has numerous tickets, so one-to-many applies there as well. The concession_detail table holds information on each concession, since there's no point in duplicating that information over and over for every physical concession object. Instead, each concession object can reference information about itself.